Good Morning Team,
Can you please jump on this. It looks like this could be another touch ID scam.

From the end user:

"I've got it refunded now. However, the app launched a pop-up asking, "Enable TouchID access to photos?", I tapped "Yes" and then it merely prompted me to place my finger on the home button. As soon as that happened, it darkened the screen's brightness to zero (so hardly anything could be read) and an in-app notification to purchase premium membership (no description whatsoever about its content) for $89.99 appeared. As the App Store purchases were Touch ID enabled, this authorized the transaction and I was charged $89.99."

Thanks
Anders

Scam

All it does is trying to make you pay 89 bucks! Lucky my card was expired to decline. Apple take this down!
